Free workshops to help cancer patients ‘look good and feel better’

Friday 3 June 2010

A free workshop will be held in Nedlands to show men and women how to deal with changes that may occur during cancer treatment.

Local MLA Tony Krsticevic said the ‘Look Good, Feel Better’ workshops provide guidance and support, particularly to women, who feel they need to camouflage the appearance-related side effects of Cancer treatment.

“The two hour workshops will be held on Saturday 24 July at Crawford Lodge, Nedlands between 9:30am and 11:30am,” Mr Krsticevic said.

“They will teach participants how to manage the changes that may occur to their skin, hair and general appearance.

“The workshops are run in a friendly and relaxed environment, and will help people living with Cancer to boost their self image and feel better about themselves.

“Participants will receive a complimentary set of skincare and makeup for use in the workshops and will be shown creative and practical ways of dealing with possible hair loss.”

For those interested in attending, registration is essential. Please call the Cancer Council of Western Australia on 13 11 20.
